FACULTY/STAFF NEWS:

David Guth and Chuck Marsh have been commissioned by Pearson/Allyn & Bacon to begin work on the sixth edition of Public Relations: A Values-Driven Approach and the fourth edition of Strategic Writing. The new editions will be published for the Fall 2014 semester.

Chuck Marsh has been elected chair of the University Core Curriculum Committee. The committee is charged with certifying courses and learning experiences nominated by academic units for inclusion in the university's new core curriculum, scheduled to begin in Fall 2013. In 2011-2012, he served on the satellite and transition committees that wrote the plan for the new curriculum.

Guth's class had a "tweet-up" session on Twitter following Romney's acceptance speech. His students are planning to do another session following Obama's acceptance speech Thursday at the Democratic National Convention, during the debates and on Election Night.

Diane Etzel-Wise (associate coordinator) and Christopher Griffith (assistant coordinator) from Human Subjects Committee of Lawrence (HSCL) visited Tim Bengtson's Strategic Campaigns class on Wednesday (Aug. 29) to provide an overview on how to design a research plan involving human subjects and to answer questions. Etzel-Wise and Griffith also explained the history and rationale of HSCL.

Max Utsler gave two presentations last week on "The Big Bucks of Television and Sports" at Village Shalom University, a week-long educational program at the Village Shalom Senior Living Community in Overland Park.

Maggie Koerth-Baker, who graduated from the school in 2004, spoke to Carol Holstead's Multimedia Reporting class on Aug. 31. She discussed her work as a science writer and her book, Before the Lights Go Out, which explains how our energy systems were built and how they work. On Aug. 30, she had a book signing at The Raven, and on Aug. 31 she also spoke at Prospero's Books in Kansas City. She is the new science columnist for the New York Times Magazine.

Hyunjin Seo's manuscript titled "Identifying public perspectives of relationships with applications to public diplomacy" was accepted for publication in Public Relations Reviews. The manuscript was coauthored with Dennis Kinsey at Syracuse University.

Doug Ward's article "Pushing Through the Perils of Online Teaching" was published last week in the ProfHacker section of the Chronicle of Higher Education website.

Ward has been appointed to the University's Teaching and Learning Technologies Team, which will advise the senior vice provost and the chief information officer on learning management systems like Blackboard, and integration of tools to aid online and hybrid learning.

Ward is part of a working group evaluating companies that would help the University accelerate development of online degree programs. The group met last week with Academic Partners of Dallas. It met in late July with Everspring, a start-up company based in Chicago.

Bob Basow traveled to Kenya in June with the Community Development team of Kansas-To-Kenya. His videos on microfinance, women's health, literacy and E-readers, and construction and drip irrigation can be seen at kansas2kenya.com/videos. His story on the team's work ran in the Lawrence Journal-World on September 2.
